FOR CROWNEST PASS HOSPITAL

APPROVAL GIVEN FOR ADDITION

A preliminary meeting was held with architects, members of the board of trustees of the Crownest Pass General Hospital, Nursing Home District No. 40, and Senior Citizens' Foundation, Mr. C. Drain, M.L.A., Mr. E. Lusin, administrator of the Crownest Pass General Hospital, Mr. G. Siska, business manager of the hospital, Miss R. Rinaldi, director of nursing of the hospital, Dr. V. Martinez, Dr. R. Varnan, and Mr. A. Wells, hospital auditor.

It was announced by the architects that financing has been arranged and approval, in principle, has been given by the Alberta Hospital Services Commission to commence with working drawings. This approval should enable construction to start in approximately four months with a tentative completion date for Feb. 1 of 1973.

A model of the complex was presented by the architects to the board for study. All areas were explained in detail and following is some of the pertinent data pertaining to the complex:

1. 30 nursing home beds.
2. Accommodation for 30 senior citizens.
3. Central dietary department with dining room which will also serve the present hospital.
4. Central administration for complete complex.

As this is a pilot project for the province of Alberta, many new features have been included in the building. Some are—

Chapel, sauna and whirlpool, bath, lounge area with fireplace, pool table, shuffleboard, croquet tables and hobby work shop.

The board meeting then adjourned to the Credit Union Hall in Blairmore where a public meeting was held. Approximately 60 interested citizens attended with many interesting and useful suggestions being made.

The model at present is on display at the hospital but will be displayed throughout the Pass as soon as arrangements can be made.

PARENTS HOLD DISCUSSION

About 11 concerned citizens met in Blairmore on Sunday to discuss the drug problem in the Crownest Pass.

Mrs. Erna Campbell acted as chairman with Mrs. Betty Slopek acting as secretary. Mr. M. Patz, wald of the RCMP was in attendance.

As the meeting progressed it was quite evident that those present were in agreement that the "drug problem" encompassed a much wider scope. A lengthy discussion brought out views which felt that preventive assistance for drug takers was as much as well as help for those already ensnared in the habit. It was also pointed out that other social factors were related to the drug problem. The parents added that communication between parents and schools was badly lacking in some areas and felt that this group should be organized to meet these needs.

It was considered that the lack of discipline and the ease with which young people are able to secure drugs was a factor in the current problem.

Much discussion centered around the schools and their administration and most parents agreed that more communication between the home and the school would help get at the root of a number of problems.

It was pointed out that the teachers would welcome closer ties with the parents and it is hoped that future plans could be made for camps, bottle drives is required.

At the Sunday meeting those tures have been included in the building. Some are—

Chapel, sauna and whirlpool, bath, lounge area with fireplace, pool table, shuffleboard, croquet tables and hobby work shop.

The board meeting then adjourned to the Credit Union Hall in Blairmore where a public meeting was held. Approximately 60 interested citizens attended with many interesting and useful suggestions being made.

Report From

PARLIAMENT HILL

ALLEN SULATYCKY
M.P.

... Rocky Mountain

On January 12, in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board, Otto Lang, had good news for the Canadian wheat farmer.

The government had been assessing the growing burden of rising costs on the wheat grower, and his dependence for income upon world pricing practices. Although many groups in Canada have the power to demand increasing returns to offset costs and to give them a share of increasing productivity, the wheat grain industry has never been in a position to do this.

It was realized that special action was justified to give a fair deal to farmers caught in the cost-price squeeze.

In 1969, the government had introduced a two-price system, when it was announced that the price for domestic human consumption wheat should be held at $19.54 while world prices went lower.

New, the government has adopted a realistic two-price system, and has agreed that the returns to farmers should be based on a domestic price for wheat, and a world price for the rest of the grain.

domestic price for wheat for human consumption at $3.00 per bushel.

In order to avoid any pressure on the price of bread, it was decided to leave the $19.54 price to millers in effect and to pay to farmers the difference between that and $18.00 from the Treasury.

The methods of payment and the distribution between farmers of different regions will be announced at a later date.

Mr. Lang cautioned that this income assistance measure should not be taken as an incentive to increase wheat production. Contrarily, he said that the same amount or even less wheat will be adequate production next year, while barely demand will require an increase in acreage.

The minister cited the making of this announcement as the better two-price system, as the greatest victory of his career.

As an indication of a better deal in sight for the wheat grower, and of a willingness of the government to explore farm problems in general, I join with many others in welcoming this plan.

HOW DO I LOVE THEE ?

By Leonhard Dowty

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee in blue jeans and black negligees.
I love thee in old p.j.'s with rabbit-ear slippers.
In housecoats and beach coats, snorkels and flippers.

I love thee with cold cream all over your face.
In calico aprons and clouds of white lace.
In department stores, stadiums and discount houses.

In plain cotton shirts and dotted Swiss blouses.
With earrings that dangle and hair-does that tower.
Up to your shoulders in soap suds or flour.

I love thee in prints with daisies and lilies,
In Kalamazoo or the Greater Antilles.
In gowns of silk and shimmering satin.
Letting the dog out and letting the cat in.

Taking the children to school or to church.
Broiling a flounder or frying a perch.
Dressed to the nines for a dinner at eight.

Looking superb, serene and sedate.
Calling on Joey, Michael and Teddy.
"All right, you kids, dinner is ready!"
And serving it up as though you wore taffeta.

I love you, my love, because I just haffeta.
Mom, treat the men in your life to these absolute yummy cookies and they'll love you even more.

guard your health by watching your weight — good health, happiness and a sense of well-being can be yours!

The success of your weight control program depends on you! If you have the desire to lose or gain extra pounds, you can do it! But don't expect miracles overnight. There will be times when your will power will weaken. Those are the times to stop, review your goals, and ask yourself:

"Do I want to look and feel better as I face each new day?"
"Do I want to enjoy shopping for new clothes and planning for social activities?"

"Do I want to protect my health so that I live a longer, fuller life?"
"Do I want my family and friends to be proud to know and associate with me?"

Of course you want all these things — and you can have them — once you accept the fact that they are the rewards of a well-planned, sensible approach to weight control.

It is wise to remember that weight control is a life-long responsibility. For many people it's a life-long struggle too. So plan your campaign, summon all your courage and determination, and make up your mind to carry it through.

Once you have overcome your immediate pound problem, stay on guard by regulating your eating and living patterns to maintain your ideal weight throughout life.

Don't guess about the need for weight control. And don't put too much faith in the advice of friends and relatives. Your doctor is the one who should decide what your normal weight should be. He'll point out that your weight is a very individual thing. He'll talk about all the factors that affect your weight. He'll explain why a particular weight is the desirable one for you. Then he'll discuss the kinds and amounts of food you should eat to reach and maintain that weight.

A lot of people are. Drugs are now wide spread. Sooner or later every young Albertan faces the decision: Do I experiment, or not? Parents find themselves shocked and dismayed — and sadly lacking in knowledge.

The Alberta Department of Culture, Youth and Recreation believes that, given the facts, young people can intelligently and maturely assess how drugs relate to their growth as persons and members of society. But the facts about drugs are often hidden in a maze of hearsay and conflicting opinions.

An information kit is available for anyone who is wondering about drugs. It presents an informative and objective picture of the known medical facts, as well as the legal and social aspects of the drug scene.

No scare tactics or minimizing. Just facts. For your copy of this information kit, write:

These are a few signs that may indicate that a young person could be abusing drugs or using narcotics. It's a sad thing to have to ask someone you love, but saying "Goodbye" is sadder still.

May Help Addicts

Officially, there has been no experimentation in British Columbia with treatment of heroin addiction by administration of carbon dioxide. The B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation, while aware of the research in this area at Philadelphia's Hahnemann Medical College, and the promising results, has not thus far studied in this field.

But privately it is possible there has been some investigation of the carbon dioxide treatment, although how far it may have gone no one is prepared to say.

Briefly, what has been done at Hahnemann College is to test the efficacy of inhalation of the gas to the point where a patient becomes unconscious. He is revived after less than a minute. The effects are noted. And the findings at this point are so encouraging as to have prompted a highly optimistic statement from a leading psychiatrist from Bellevue Hospital in New York.

Dr. Albert Laverne, who pioneered the treatment, asserts: "It may be the solution to the nation's soaring heroin addiction and related crime problem."

Studies show that carbon dioxide therapy "demonstrably removes the psychological and physical dependence for the short term... addicts showed an almost immediate change in attitude after each treatment."

In 12 so-called "hard core" heroin addicts treated there, was some evidence "that it may remove drug dependence for the long term also."

The most promising aspect of the experiment seems to be that the patient's outlook on life is changed, and withdrawal depression and pain gives way to what is described as a "happy" attitude.

Another important aspect of this therapy is that it could replace methadone. Methadone is itself an addictive drug, but without the destructive effect of heroin. It was introduced in this country by the B.C. Narcotic Addiction Foundation in 1962, and used with marked success.

It must be hoped that the foundation will be given whatever support it needs to make its own practical appraisal of this new therapy, for there are few, if any, agencies in Canada better equipped or more experienced for undertaking such an assessment.

Here is an opportunity for the Health Minister to move swiftly, without waiting interminably for the recommendations of committees and commissions. Let him, for once, throw caution to the winds and spend a few thousand dollars where there can be no question of the good it can do.

The Horn Of Plenty

Dip your pen in sunshine and send a letter of thanks this week to Ontario social services director R. S. Pierce.

Mr. Pierce, for all of you who are seriously considering giving up the work-a-day rat race, claims no person should be denied welfare simply because he refuses an honest day's employment.

The benevolent Mr. Pierce claims the approach to welfare "has changed drastically in the past few years and possibly we should be prepared to accept the fact that some individuals will not work."

Yes, Mr. Pierce, the approach to welfare has changed — mainly from attitudes such as you condone.

The answer to the problem is simple enough. All it takes is a little determination, and self-respect, from those who dish out government gratuities. Anyone who can work — but won't — can starve. A hungry man will be on his feet soon enough if his supply of tax-paid goodies is suddenly and permanently cut off.

Mr. Pierce also believes welfare should not be stopped to families whose main provider (husband, common law or otherwise) refuses to work.

Possibly so. But welfare can be stopped for the person unwilling to toil for his daily bread. If a family is involved, provision should be made for that family (mother and children) if a need is apparent.

As for those who can work — but won't — tough luck.

The Canadian taxpayer is fed up with working his fingers to the bone for the benefit of social parasites.

How To Deal With Women's Lib

What with this being Leap Year, and all, and the Women's Lib growing ever and ever more shrill, it could be a bad year for the gentle sex: men.

Not that I ever did hold much with that Leap Year business. There might have been some merit in the idea that once every four years, a lass could pick her lad, in bygone times.

But it is my conviction, based on careful observation, that the custom is out of date. In these times, if a girl sets her eye on a likely candidate, she whips her tentacles around him, hangs on until he stops struggling, and carries him home to be devoured, with utter disregard of whether or not the year can be divided by four.

Now the Women's Lib movement is another thing. There's scarcely a man in the country who dares make a crack about women any more. He knows that the slightest smile will result in his head either being blown off by a grape-shot charge of vituperation, or sliced off by the guillotine edge of irony. These dames are dangerous, and they fight under their own rules.

The only people who can stand up to them are other women, who know a good deal when they have one, and don't believe in Women's Lib.

That's one of the things that might make it a rough year. If the two factions go at it hammer and tongs some day, what's a man to do? He's going to be caught in the cross-fire, no matter what he says.

If he supports Women's Lib through altruistic motives (like maybe his wife is a believer), he is liable to find that she will turn on him in scorn and denounce him as a boot-licker who is trying to get in on the ground floor of the revolution.

If he attacks the movement from profound conviction (like maybe his wife is against it), he is liable to find that she'll turn on him in fury because it turns out that he, really is a male chauvinist pig, after all. That old saying about "sisters under the skin" is not to be sneered at. Not in these troublous times.

I repeat, what is a man to do? There was a time, not so long ago, when the male of the species could retreat to some sort of a simulated dugout when women got into a flap; his club, the Legion Hall, a bar, the poolroom.

Not any more. The women have infiltrated every one of these homes-away-from-home, and there is no place to hide.

Men are constantly and plaintively asking about women the rather bewildered question that Anglo-Canadians have used so oft in recent years about the Quebecois: "What is it they want, anyway?"

At the risk, nay, the certainty, of being assailed from every direction that is illogical, I'll put my life on the firing line, while the rest of you cowers skulk behind your wives, common law or otherwise.

What is it that women want? Nothing much, really. Just everything they can get. I don't just mean material things, though I've never met a bird yet who wasn't convinced that one in the hand is worth two in the bush, whether they're dealing with fur coats, cologne, TV, labour-saving devices, new dresses — or men.

But these are not important among their wants. The things they are really seeking are on a much higher plane.

Persons they want a strong man. This is built the fun of the game. It's a challenge. Sometimes it takes as long as two years before they can completely dominate a strong man. If they have chosen a weak man, he's already dominated before marriage, which takes a lot of the zest out of the game. They want to be loved. This is a normal, and even lofty aspiration. So do men. But women want to be loved all the time. This is where things get a bit dicey.

No man wants to be loved all the time. I'd like to see someone trying to love me at 7 a.m. as I slouch toward the bathroom like some arthritic plantigrade (look it up), yawning, groaning, scratching. In the first place, I'm completely unlovable. In the second, any woman who tried to express her devotion at that moment would be snarled at.

Women are different. Just the other night, after an 18-hour day, I crawled into bed, put my limp ment-rubbed neck on the heating pad, yawned mightily, vaguely patting my wife on the bum, and fell asleep. Twelve seconds later I got a belt in the ribs from man elbow. "You didn't say, 'Good night, dear,'" she snapped, and I got a ten-minute tirade about couples drifting apart when such amenities are omitted.

I've just touched on the things women really want, and already I feel that I'm over my head. What do they want, anyway?

The answer is yes, if as well as loving the guy, she wants a husband who can earn good money, and a man who works in a stable industry so he's assured of steady work. New technological advances have revitalized the coal mining industry, created opportunities for young men to learn new skills, to work with a trained team of men, and to move ahead.
